MINIATURE CITY IS ABOUT COMPLETED

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 13 .- A miniature city lighted by electricity from its own plant and erected from lumher cut by its own sawmill was recently completed at the site of the city of Seattle's hydro-electric project on Gerge creek, 100 miles northeast of here, to house employes and their

The first step in the project was to install the employes in comfortable quarters, which meant providing homes and means for recreation. The alte is 26 miles from the terminus of a branch line of the Great Northern railroad without even a good wagon road over which machinery and materials might be transported. City engineers finally decided to construct a standard gauge railroad over the mountains to the scene of that work.

A few months later engines that were to drive the mill were hauled over the new railroad and presently were delivering lumber at the rate of months board feet a day. Another few weeks and the town, with its componency, its athletic fields, movies, library, dance hall, homes, took its pare on the map of Washington.

Then a power plant was constructed to scoply light and later to operate at machinery used in connection with the development. To accomplanting a timber crib diversion dam was built on Newhalem creek, near by From this dam a 2689-foot tunno carries the water to the power plant in the Skagit river, where the generalies create 3000 horsepower.
